

The Daily 5

The Daily 5 is set up in our classroom to promote student responsibility. For the first couple of weeks, we (the teachers) would choose which of the five the students were going to do during the day. This was to make sure each of the students experienced all of the activities. Then, once the students understood what they were supposed to be doing, we eventually made it so that they could choose which of the five they were going to do that day.

The five activities that the students could choose from included: Read to Self (R), Read to Someone (RS), Listen to Reading (LR), Word Work (WW), or Writing (W).
